The hissing of geese once saved Rome. We very much fear that continual hissings against all projects of progress will not save Georgia. The wisdom of circulating in Europe the reports of the Agricultural Department has been abundantly demoustrated. Congress authorized the publication of a large edition in the German, Scandinavian and other languages of continental Europe. The matter for this edition was specially prepared, consisting of a description of the agricultural and mineral resources of the United States, the quali-ty of available lands and products thereon, climate, etc. Copies have been distributed by our consuls at the principal ports. A large number of copies in English were also distributed through the rural districts of Great Britain. The knowledge of our country afforded by this publication has given an immense impetus to immigration from Europe. The number of emigrants arriving at the various Atlantic ports since the 1st of January has been almost unpredented, and the tide of hardy sons of toil flowing to this country will, it is thought, continue to be enormous. A letter was received to-day at the Agricultural Department from the American Consul at Belfast, Ireland, in which he says that 2,300 of the flower of the youth of that region had sailed for America during the month of April. The section of country around Belfast is inhabited by the most intelligent and industrious of the Irish race, and such a people will be a great acquisical office, opened his eyes and creeted his ears. tion to any locality where they may be settle. The Consul says that the determination of these people to come to this country was due in a great measure to information obtained from the agricultural report.
